DRESSY CAPE IN GRAY CORDED SILK, WITH TRIMMING OF BLACK AP-PLIQUÉ AND

CHIFFON RUCHING.

Capes are such dressy and convenient little wraps that they are always in favor for car-riage, visiting and other dressy wear, being made up in a fancy style of silk, velvet or satin and elaborately trimmed. One of the smartest capes yet shown is made after a Delineator in gray Bengaline silk, with black silk appliqué, black ribbon and ruffles of doubled gray chiffon for ornamentation. The gape is double and has for its chief feature a Vandyke collar that forms short points at the back and in front of the shoulders, but the lower edge at the reaches in a point to the lower edge at the front. A ribbon belt is attached to the front corners, holding the cape in to the fig-ure at the front in a becoming way.

Better never plant the garden, orchard or berry patch than to leave it to negle ct. The weeds and the water sprouts thrive, absorb the nourishment, and steal every possible gain away.

No question but that well fed chickens lay the best. There should be GRAIN, SEEDS ens lay the best. There should be ample variety and plenty of it. Even in summer the grasses and bugs do not ratisfy them, and a feed of grain will be well returned in eggs.

> There are undiscovered troubles among chickens of which cholera is bu the symptom. In no real sense is cholera a disease in itself. It is never likely to appear if fowls are kept properly, fed right, and are not tormented

A dose of carbolic acid is not fatal to some forms of parasitic life. There is more potency in lime, and if poultry houses are whitewashed from time to time the nuisance will be surely abated, despite the rapid breeding. An additional help is to grease the perches din the nds in solid grease.

At the time of a cold enap a coating of s'eet which envelops a tree conserves all the ratural warmth gathered by the vital forces therein, and the cold with-GRAIN, SEEDS, WOOL, ETC. out seems to do no harm. In warme climates, where unexpected frosts come now and then, the fruit has been preserved by spraying the whole tree with water until it was covered with a coating of ice from top to bottom. Whe the weather moderated it left the fruit HARD AND SOFT COAL uninjured. Hogs have been called the poor man's sheep. In starting with them but little capital is required; a small flock of the best native sheep to be found, and a plete the equipment. Neither is there a C. B. 20. Ry. long wait for the returns to begin. The best results in sheep growing is attained by handling sheep which will produce s six pound fleece upon a hundred pound carcass, worth the top notch price a

The poultry house floor is responsible The poultry house floor is responsible for a good many of the evils chickens Dning are heir to; if not in a good sanitary condition, it is a fruitful source of infection, and a breeding place for insects. If made of boards, let it be well up from the ground; if of earth, let it be either much hi, her than the surrounding ground or well tiled, or let there be a good ditch dug about the building. A good tile around the outside usually answers the purpose well. In any event, by some means avoid damp floors.

In the East many firms, who supply coultrymen, make it a part of them business to keep in stock a supply of clover hay for the fowls during the winter. Second crop clover is the best, and should be cut quite green and well dried. This makes a delightful cold weather ration for hens when cut short and mixed with bran or shorts in boiling werer. The fowls will set it boiling warer. The fowls will eat it eagerly, and will manifest their thanks in redoubled energies in laying.

For the new orchard select land where the soil is not too light; let it be rather high, but not exposed to sweeping winds. Drain it thoroughly. It is a good way to plant the apple trees about 50 feet apart, and the pears, plums and cherries between them. Let no animals encroach but the chickens. Plow it thoroughly every year, and cultivate is sufficiently often to keep all weeds down, at least. There must ba a never ending war against insects if you would have an orchard which is to be a source of delight and profit.
